Dr. Hope Shaw

Hope Shaw was born in Montego Bay, graduated Kingston School of Nursing in 1987, and worked on the Medical Surgical unit at different hospitals in Jamaica. Migrating to the United States in 1995 she joined the open-heart team at Miami Heart Institute. She earned her BA (Finance) at Florida International University, MSN (Education) at the University of Phoenix and PhD at Barry University. She has prepared over 200 nurses as generalist and specialist to work in the operating room. Hope is currently an Adjunct Faculty in the undergraduate program at the Christine Lynn College of Nursing. A member of STTI, Hope has previously served as vice president and web administrator for AORN Broward Chapter, Review Writer for the competency and credentialing institute (CCI), Subject Matter Expert for AORN, and chair the Professional Development Committee at Cleveland Clinic Florida. Her first published article appeared in the International Journal for Human Caring (September 2018). She has co-authored her specialty practice certification study guide and AORN's online teaching modules. Her husband of 29 years is an Anesthesiologist and her biggest cheerleader. They have two children Jason (27) and Tonya (22). When Hope is not teaching, writing, coaching, and consulting she compliments her well-being with reading, running, cross fit exercise, road cycling, and traveling.
